The Absolutely True Diary of A Part-Time Indian by Sherman Alexie

This hilarious semi-autobiographical tale of a boy who leaves his Spokane Indian Reservation school to attend an all-white high school. Perfect for anyone who ever searched for a place to belong.

Girl.Boy.Sea. by Chris Vick

Floating in a small lifeboat somewhere on the Mediterranean, Bill is about to give up hope, when he spots something drifting in the distance. In true Arabian Nights-style, this adventure story keeps you guessing.

They Called Us Enemy by George Takei

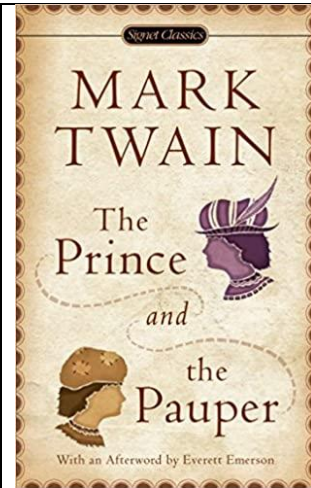

Activist and actor George Takei was 4 years old when his family and other people of Japanese descent were rounded up and sent to internment camps in the United States. This graphic novel tells the chilling story from a child's perspective.

The Prince and the Pauper by Mark Twain

The classic tale of mistaken identity in the court of King Henry VIII.

How to Make Friends with the Dark by Kathleen Glasgow

Tragedy strikes 16-year-old Tiger's family and she must find a way to live with loss. A story about finding your family and growing up.
